

403 Mass. 604, 532 N.E.2d 631

Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

Michael P. CARNEY

v.

CITY OF SPRINGFIELD et al. [\[FN1\]](#)

FN1. Civil Service Commission; the Springfield Division of the District Court is named as a nominal party.

Dec. 19, 1988.

Police officer appealed two five-day suspensions and discharge from police department for refusal to answer questions during internal investigation of alleged narcotics violations by members of the department. The Civil Service Commission approved the suspensions and discharge, and police officer sought judicial review. The District Court upheld the Commission's decision. Police officer filed action in the nature of certiorari. The Superior Court Department, Hampden County, John F. Murphy, Jr., J., granted summary judgment for city. Police officer appealed and case was transferred. The Supreme Judicial Court, Nolan, J., held that: (1) department did not properly advise police officer of his options and specific consequences of refusal to answer questions put to him, and (2) department did not adequately assure officer of scope of his immunity from subsequent criminal prosecution if he answered the questions. Reversed.

West Headnotes

[\[1\] KeyCite Notes](#)

15A Administrative Law and Procedure

15AIII Judicial Remedies Prior to or Pending Administrative Proceedings

15Ak229 k. Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies. Most Cited Cases

Action in the nature of certiorari lies only where petitioner has exhausted all administrative remedies. M.G.L.A. c. 249, § 4.

[\[2\] KeyCite Notes](#)

73 Certiorari

73I Nature and Grounds

73k29 k. Errors and Irregularities. Most Cited Cases

In action in the nature of certiorari, court will correct only substantial error of law, evidenced by the record, which adversely effects material right of plaintiff. M.G.L.A. c. 249, § 4.

[\[3\] KeyCite Notes](#)

- 🔗 110 Criminal Law
 - 🔗 110XVII Evidence
 - 🔗 110XVII\(I\) Competency in General
 - 🔗 110k393 Compelling Accused to Criminate Himself
 - 🔗 110k393\(1\) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Informal "immunity" under the Fifth Amendment can arise where public employees are compelled to answer questions narrowly and specifically related to their job performance; although not under the umbrella of statutory immunity, such statements are inadmissible in subsequent criminal proceeding because they result from compelled testimony under the Fifth Amendment. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; M.G.L.A. c. 233, §§ 20C-20I.

[\[4\] KeyCite Notes](#)

- 🔗 110 Criminal Law
 - 🔗 110XVII Evidence
 - 🔗 110XVII\(I\) Competency in General
 - 🔗 110k393 Compelling Accused to Criminate Himself
 - 🔗 110k393\(1\) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

- 🔗 283 Officers and Public Employees KeyCite Notes
 - 🔗 283I Appointment, Qualification, and Tenure
 - 🔗 283I\(G\) Resignation, Suspension, or Removal
 - 🔗 283k66 k. Grounds for Removal. Most Cited Cases

Public employees cannot be discharged simply because they invoke their privilege under the Fifth Amendment not to incriminate themselves in refusing to respond to questions propounded by their employers; however, public employees can be discharged for refusing to answer questions narrowly drawn and specifically related to their job performance, where answers cannot be used against them in criminal proceeding. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.

[\[5\] KeyCite Notes](#)

- 🔗 110 Criminal Law
 - 🔗 110XVII Evidence
 - 🔗 110XVII\(M\) Declarations
 - 🔗 110k411 Declarations by Accused
 - 🔗 110k412.1 Voluntary Character of Statement
 - 🔗 110k412.1\(1\) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Statements compelled from public employees at disciplinary hearing, under threat of discharge, cannot constitutionally be held against them in later criminal prosecution. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.

[\[6\] KeyCite Notes](#)

- 🔗 283 Officers and Public Employees

- ↳ 283I Appointment, Qualification, and Tenure
- ↳ 283I\(G\) Resignation, Suspension, or Removal
- ↳ 283k66 k. Grounds for Removal. Most Cited Cases

Where public employer compels answers in investigation, employer, at time of interrogation, must specify to employee the precise repercussions--i.e., suspension, discharge, or the exact form of discipline--that will result if employee fails to respond.

[7] KeyCite Notes

- ↳ 268 Municipal Corporations
- ↳ 268V Officers, Agents, and Employees
- ↳ 268V\(B\) Municipal Departments and Officers Thereof
- ↳ 268k179 Police
- ↳ 268k185 Suspension and Removal of Policemen
- ↳ 268k185\(2\) k. Defenses. Most Cited Cases

General warning that police officer would be subject to "departmental disciplinary proceedings" if he did not answer questions regarding his fitness to perform official duties was insufficient to satisfy employer's obligation to specify precise repercussions that would result if officer failed to respond to questions; officer's refusal to answer resulted in two five-day suspensions and discharge for insubordination, neglect, disobedience of orders, and act contrary to the good order and discipline of the department.

[8] KeyCite Notes

- ↳ 283 Officers and Public Employees
- ↳ 283I Appointment, Qualification, and Tenure
- ↳ 283I\(G\) Resignation, Suspension, or Removal
- ↳ 283k66 k. Grounds for Removal. Most Cited Cases

Where public employer compels answers in investigation, employee's awareness that other employees have been punished in similar circumstances does not render unnecessary employer's recitation of warning of precise repercussions that will result if employee fails to respond to questions; burden to inform remains on employer at each appropriate stage of the questioning.

[9] KeyCite Notes

- ↳ 110 Criminal Law
- ↳ 110XVII Evidence
- ↳ 110XVII\(M\) Declarations
- ↳ 110k411 Declarations by Accused
- ↳ 110k412.1 Voluntary Character of Statement
- ↳ 110k412.1\(1\) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

- ↳ 283 Officers and Public Employees KeyCite Notes
- ↳ 283I Appointment, Qualification, and Tenure

- 🔗 283I\(G\) Resignation, Suspension, or Removal
- 🔗 283k66 k. Grounds for Removal. Most Cited Cases

Employer may compel employee under threat of discharge to answer questions reasonably related to job performance; however, any answers obtained involuntarily may not be used against employee in subsequent criminal proceeding because of the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.

[10] KeyCite Notes

- 🔗 110 Criminal Law
- 🔗 110XVII Evidence
- 🔗 110XVII\(I\) Competency in General
- 🔗 110k393 Compelling Accused to Criminate Himself
- 🔗 110k393\(1\) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

Fifth Amendment exclusionary rule provides the functional equivalent of "use" or "derivative use" immunity, which is all the Fifth Amendment requires to displace the privilege against self-incrimination. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.

[11] KeyCite Notes

- 🔗 110 Criminal Law
- 🔗 110XVII Evidence
- 🔗 110XVII\(I\) Competency in General
- 🔗 110k393 Compelling Accused to Criminate Himself
- 🔗 110k393\(1\) k. In General. Most Cited Cases

The Massachusetts Constitution's privilege against self-incrimination requires transactional immunity to supplant the privilege against self-incrimination, even in the context of public employment. M.G.L.A. Const. Pt. 1, Art. 12.

[12] KeyCite Notes

- 🔗 268 Municipal Corporations
- 🔗 268V Officers, Agents, and Employees
- 🔗 268V\(B\) Municipal Departments and Officers Thereof
- 🔗 268k179 Police
- 🔗 268k185 Suspension and Removal of Policemen
- 🔗 268k185\(1\) k. Grounds for Removal or Suspension. Most Cited Cases

Police Department did not adequately assure police officer of scope of his immunity from subsequent criminal prosecution if he answered questions in internal investigation of alleged narcotic violations by members of the department, and thus, police officer could not be suspended or discharged for refusing to answer questions; police officer never received from the district attorney promise not to prosecute, and even assuming police officer in charge of internal investigation could make enforceable promise not to prosecute without district attorney's assent, record did not reflect that such promise was made. M.G.L.A. Const. Pt. 1, Art. 12.

605 632 Kevin B. Coyle, East Longmeadow, for plaintiff.
Richard T. Egan, City Sol., for the City of Springfield.

James M. Shannon, Atty. Gen., & Lisa A. Levy, Asst. Atty. Gen., for Civil Service Commission.

Before *604 WILKINS, ABRAMS, NOLAN and LYNCH, JJ.

*605 NOLAN, Justice.

The plaintiff, Michael P. Carney, appeals from a Superior Court judgment entered following allowance of a motion for summary judgment filed by the city of Springfield. The test whether a motion for summary judgment should be allowed is twofold: (1) whether after consideration of the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and affidavits, a genuine issue of material fact exists; and (2) whether the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Mass.R.Civ.P. 56\(c\), 365 Mass. 824 (1974). The Superior Court judge, in this action in the nature of certiorari, as provided by G.L. c. 249, § 4 \(1986 ed.\), affirmed a District Court judge's decision. The judgment in the District Court upheld the Civil Service Commission's approval of the board of police commissioners' successive votes to suspend Carney on two occasions and then to discharge him from the Springfield police department. Carney appealed. We transferred the case to this court on our own motion. We now reverse.

[1]  [2]  1. Standard of Review. An action under G.L. c. 249, § 4, lies only where the petitioner has exhausted all administrative633 remedies. Reidy v. Acting Director of Civil Service, 354 Mass. 760, 236 N.E.2d 88 (1968). A court will correct only a substantial error of law, evidenced by the record, which adversely affects a material right of the plaintiff. Murray v. Second District Court of E. Middlesex, 389 Mass. 508, 511, 451 N.E.2d 408 (1983). In its review, the court may rectify only those errors of law "which have resulted in manifest injustice to the plaintiff or which have adversely affected the real interests of the general public." Id. Our review, then, is to determine whether the Superior Court correctly determined that the record before the District Court showed no error of law in the commission's decision which adversely affected one of Carney's material rights. Id.

*606 2. The Facts. In June of 1984, the police department began investigating alleged violations of narcotics laws by members of the department. [FN2] Several officers were ordered to report to the department's Internal Investigation Unit (I.I.U.) regarding their fitness to perform their duties as police officers. Three department officers sought to enjoin the department from compelling them to report. [FN3] The Superior Court issued a declaration of rights but denied the officers' request for injunctive relief. [FN4]

[FN2]. The record reflects that department officials were pursuing both a criminal investigation and an administrative investigation simultaneously.

[FN3]. See Doe v. Springfield, 403 Mass. 1010, 532 N.E.2d 639 (1988). Officer Carney was not a party to that action.

[FN4]. See Springfield v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 403 Mass. 612, 532 N.E.2d 636 (1988). One of those officers, John Lynch, was ordered to report for questioning, refused, and was suspended for five days. He was again ordered to report, again refused to do so, and again was suspended for five days. Subsequently, he was discharged from his position.

On August 8, 1984, Carney was ordered to report to the I.I.U. for questioning regarding his fitness to perform his official duties. The order made clear that the questioning concerned an ongoing criminal investigation which would "continue until the termination, by trial or otherwise, of such indictments as are presently pending." Carney was provided with a set of detailed questions addressing the purchase, sale, and use of controlled substances by certain Springfield police officers.

Deputy Chief of Police Robert Flanagan read Carney the Miranda warnings, including a warning that anything he said could be used against him in court. Carney refused to waive his right to remain silent, claiming rights under the Massachusetts and United States Constitutions. Flanagan then "acknowledged" that Carney had not waived his right to remain silent but ordered Carney to respond under threat of "departmental disciplinary proceedings." Carney twice indicated that he did not understand and asked Flanagan for clarification regarding the type of "proceedings" to which he would be subject. Flanagan merely repeated that he would be subject to departmental discipline. When Flanagan asked Carney for the third time if he understood, Carney responded, "Yes I do, whatever they *607 might be. I don't know." Carney's attorney then objected to the questioning. Carney again asserted all the constitutional rights he might have, and refused to answer the questions. The interrogation concluded shortly thereafter. The chief of police, Paul Fenton, suspended Carney that same day for refusing to answer the questions. Although Carney appealed his suspension and received a hearing on August 13, 1984, the appointing authority, the board of police commissioners, upheld it. He appealed.

Carney was again ordered to report to the I.I.U. for questioning. He appeared on August 16, 1984, was again given Miranda warnings, and told that anything he said could be used against him in court. Carney again declined to waive his constitutional rights but stated that he would answer some questions. Flanagan, the questioning officer, then acknowledged Carney's refusal to waive his rights and informed Carney that if he did not answer the questions regarding his fitness to perform his official duties that he would be subject to "departmental disciplinary proceedings."

 634 [3] At this point during the questioning, a discussion ensued between the city solicitor and Carney's attorney about whether the answers to the questions could be used against Carney in court. Carney's attorney inquired what efforts had been made to obtain immunity for Carney. [FN5] On advice of counsel, Carney *608 refused to answer any further questions and was again suspended for a five-day period. He appealed the suspension.

[FN5]. Part of the confusion regarding the use of Carney's statements in a subsequent criminal proceeding arises out of the word "immunity." The Superior Court's declaratory judgment in Doe v. Springfield, 403 Mass. at 614, 532 N.E.2d at 638 states that "[a]bsent a valid granted immunity, the officers may exercise their constitutional rights and refuse to answer questions." In Massachusetts, a grant of immunity may be obtained for grand jury proceedings only from a single justice of the Supreme Judicial Court. See G.L. c. 233, §§ 20C-20I (1986 ed.). We have previously held, however, that where a defendant relies on the promise made by an assistant district attorney, the court will enforce the promise because the sovereign must adhere to the highest degree of ethics. See Commonwealth v. Benton, 356 Mass. 447, 448-449, 252 N.E.2d 891 (1969). Informal "immunity" under the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution can also arise where public employees are compelled to answer questions narrowly and specifically related to their job performance. See, e.g., Garrity v. New Jersey, 385 U.S. 493, 87 S.Ct. 616, 17 L.Ed.2d 562 (1967). Although not under the umbrella of statutory immunity, such statements are inadmissible in a subsequent criminal proceeding because they result from compelled testimony under the Fifth Amendment. Baker v. Lawrence, 379 Mass. 322, 331 n. 14, 409 N.E.2d 710 (1979) (immunity arises because of pressure of job sanction even absent statute). Therefore, the exclusionary rule found on the Fifth Amendment automatically bars their admissibility. Garrity, supra 385 U.S. at 500, 87 S.Ct. at 620.

On August 20, 1984, Carney received notice of disciplinary charges and, after a hearing on August 24, 1984, before the board of police commissioners, Carney was discharged as a police officer for insubordination, neglect, disobedience of orders, and an act contrary to the good order and discipline of the department.

Carney then appealed the decision to the commission, as provided by G.L. c. 31, §§ 41-43 \(1986 ed.\). On October 23, 1984, the commission heard the consolidated appeals from the two five-day suspensions and Carney's discharge from the department. The commission found no violation of Carney's rights under either the United States or Massachusetts Constitutions and that the questions propounded to Carney fell within the permissible scope of inquiry as established by both State and Federal law. Accordingly, the commission concluded that just cause existed to support the actions taken by the authority against Carney, and recommended upholding the two five-day suspensions and the discharge.

Despite subsequent appeals to the commission, to the District Court, and, by an action in the nature of certiorari, to the Superior Court as provided by G.L. c. 249, § 4 \(1986 ed.\), the commission's decision to uphold Carney's suspension and discharge was repeatedly affirmed.

Carney presents two issues on appeal: (1) whether the department properly advised Carney of his options and the specific consequences of his refusal to answer questions put to him; and (2) whether the department adequately assured Carney of the scope of his immunity from subsequent criminal prosecution if he answered the questions. For the reasons set forth below, we conclude that the department, in its interrogation of Carney, failed in both these respects.

 [\[4\]](#)  [\[5\]](#) 3. Consequences Resulting from Refusal to Respond. It is well settled that public employees cannot be discharged simply *609 because they invoke their privilege under the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution not to incriminate themselves in refusing to respond to questions propounded by their employers. Uniformed Sanitation Men Ass'n, Inc. v. Commissioner of Sanitation of New York, 392 U.S. 280, 283-284, 88 S.Ct. 1917, 1919, 20 L.Ed.2d 1089 \(1968\). Statements compelled from employees at a disciplinary hearing, under threat of discharge, cannot constitutionally be held against them in a later criminal prosecution. Garrity v. New Jersey, 385 U.S. 493, 500, 87 S.Ct. 616, 620, 17 L.Ed.2d 562 \(1967\). Notwithstanding the Fifth Amendment prohibition, a public employer does 635 not remain totally helpless in discovering information relevant to its employees' job performance. Indeed, as we held in Broderick v. Police Comm'r of Boston, 368 Mass. 33, 38, 330 N.E.2d 199 \(1975\), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1048, 96 S.Ct. 773, 46 L.Ed.2d 636 \(1976\), public employees can be discharged for refusing to answer questions narrowly drawn and specifically related to their job performance, where the answers cannot be used against them in a criminal proceeding.

 [\[6\]](#)  [\[7\]](#)  [\[8\]](#) Where public employers compel answers in an investigation, however, the employer, at the time of the interrogation, must specify to the employee the precise repercussions (i.e., suspension, discharge, or the exact form of discipline) that will result if the employee fails to respond. See Kalkines v. United States, 473 F.2d 1391, 1393, 200 Ct.Cl. 570 \(1973\). Where, as here, economic sanctions threaten an individual's livelihood, a general warning that the employee may be subject to "departmental disciplinary proceedings" is insufficient. [\[FN6\]](#) Moreover, an employee's awareness that other employees have been punished in similar circumstances does not render recitation of the warning *610 unnecessary; the burden to inform remains on the employer at each appropriate stage of the questioning. The record demonstrates that Deputy Chief Flanagan, while interrogating Carney, failed to meet this standard.

FN6. Although the United States Supreme Court has not spoken directly to this issue, in factually similar cases, the Court has specifically noted instances where public employees were informed of the precise punishment, usually dismissal, for refusing to answer questions put to them by their employers. See, e.g., Garrity v. New Jersey, 385 U.S. 493, 494, 87 S.Ct. 616, 617, 17 L.Ed.2d 562 (1967) (each applicant warned that refusal to answer could result in removal from office); Uniformed Sanitation Men Ass'n, Inc., supra 392 U.S. at 284, 88 S.Ct. at 1919 (employees required to answer questions where threatened by loss of public employment); accord Confederation of Police v. Conlisk, 489 F.2d 891, 895 (7th Cir.1973) (police officers aware that refusal to answer questions could result in discharge).

[\[9\]](#)  [\[10\]](#)  [\[11\]](#)  4. Transactional Immunity Required to Compel Testimony. An employer may compel an employee under threat of discharge to answer questions reasonably related to job performance. Patch v. Mayor of Revere, 397 Mass. 454, 455, 492 N.E.2d 77 (1986). Because of the United States Constitution's Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination, however, any answers obtained involuntarily may not be used against the employee in a subsequent criminal proceeding. Garrity v. New Jersey, 385 U.S. 493, 500, 87 S.Ct. 616, 620, 17 L.Ed.2d 562 (1967). This Fifth Amendment exclusionary rule provides the functional equivalent of "use" or "derivative use" immunity, which is all the Fifth Amendment requires to displace the privilege. Kastigar v. United States, 406 U.S. 441, 453, 92 S.Ct. 1653, 1661, 32 L.Ed.2d 212 (1972). In Lefkowitz v. Turley, 414 U.S. 70, 85, 94 S.Ct. 316, 326, 38 L.Ed.2d 274 (1973), the United States Supreme Court stated, however, that where answers were elicited under threat of the loss of employment, "States must offer to the witness whatever immunity is required to supplant the privilege...." (emphasis added). This court has traditionally exercised its prerogative to interpret art. 12, the Massachusetts Constitution's privilege against self incrimination, more broadly than its Federal counterpart. [\[FN7\]](#) See Attorney Gen. v. Colleton, 387 Mass. 790, 795-796, 444 N.E.2d 915 (1982). In Massachusetts, art. 12 of the Declaration of Rights requires transactional immunity to supplant the privilege against self-incrimination, [\[FN8\]](#) even in the context of public employment. *636 Cf. 611 Attorney Gen. v. Colleton, supra at 793, 444 N.E.2d 915 (transactional immunity required in context of private citizen).

FN7. The Fifth Amendment states in pertinent part that "[no] ... person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." U.S. Const. amend. V. Article 12 of the Declaration of Rights is somewhat broader and states: "No subject shall be ... compelled to accuse or furnish evidence against himself...."

FN8. The Supreme Court described transactional immunity as that which "grant[s] immunity from prosecution for offenses to which compelled testimony relates." Kastigar v. United States, 406 U.S. 441, 443, 92 S.Ct. 1653, 1655, 32 L.Ed.2d 212 (1972). Use and derivative use immunity are described as "immunity from the use of compelled testimony and evidence derived therefrom." Id.

As our opinion in Colleton makes clear, this court has never before faced the question whether transactional immunity is needed to overcome a claim of testimonial privilege by a public employee. Colleton, supra at 798, 444 N.E.2d 915. While Baker v. Lawrence, 379 Mass. 322, 409 N.E.2d 710 (1979), and Silverio v. Municipal Court of the City of Boston, 355 Mass. 623, 247 N.E.2d 379, cert. denied, 396 U.S. 878, 90 S.Ct. 151, 24 L.Ed.2d 135 (1969), recognized the sufficiency of use immunity under the United States Constitution, neither case focused on the removal of the employee's claim of privilege, but rather on the official's ability or fitness for government service. Colleton, supra 387 Mass. at 798, 444 N.E.2d 915. Significantly, neither the plaintiffs in Baker, and Silverio, supra, nor the plaintiff in Patch v. Mayor of Revere, supra, invoked the privilege against self-incrimination under art. 12, and chose to rely instead on the Fifth Amendment.

[12] The record clearly demonstrates that Officer Carney never received from the district attorney a promise not to prosecute him. Assuming without deciding that a police official in charge of an internal investigation could make an enforceable promise not to prosecute without the district attorney's assent, the record does not reflect such a promise was made. Carney, therefore, has demonstrated error adversely affecting his material rights resulting from the trial judge's allowance of Springfield's motion for summary judgment.

The judgment is reversed and a new judgment shall be entered quashing the decision of the Civil Service Commission.

So ordered.

Mass., 1988.

Carney v. City of Springfield
403 Mass. 604, 532 N.E.2d 631
END OF DOCUMENT